San Juan, Puerto Rico

The USTA CARIBBEAN SECTION did not have a tennis facility in Puerto Rico with adequate tennis facilities to host a major tennis event. The Association retained Global to develop a Master Plan and the tennis specific construction documents for a new Tennis Center working with a local Architectural firm. The venue will be constructed in two phases. The first phase includes 16 courts and two comfort stations in a park-like setting and was completed in 2003. The facility hosted the Davis Cup Tie between Puerto Rico and Jamaica in April 2004. The final phase will include a permanent Stadium Court, a 4-Court Training Facility, a large Clubhouse and a tournament support area. When completed the Tennis Center will provide the Section with a facility to host local, state, national and international tennis tournaments.
